The United States is using the television-guided Walleye for precision bombing of North Vietnam—and the Communists know it!

A North Vietnamese army paper, Quan Doi Nhan Dan, gives so many details about the highly secret weapon that it is possible the Communists captured a Walleye intact.

The Hanoi radio broadcast part of the army report on the Walleye, giving out far more details than have been released here by the Pentagon.

The Communist radio concluded that the Walleye could be foiled by sending a dark smoke screen over likely targets.

Walleye is one of the weapons that have helped change the character of the air war over the North.

The weapon enables a pilot to blow up a power plant in the middle of a populated area with little risk to civilian life there.

The pilot sets his sights on the power plant, fires the missile while still miles away from antiaircraft defenses and then watches the path of Wal-
